Get a celebrity smile with a trendy toothpaste

Posted Monday, September 14, 2009

If there's anyone who knows a thing or two about ways to whiten your teeth, it's a cosmetic dentist. Members of this profession also have an outstanding underlying knowledge of general dental health. With this kind of expertise, it's no surprise that a cosmetic dentist like Dr. Debra Glassman has created a distinctive whitening toothpaste that also cares for the condition of your teeth.

Packaged in an eye-catchingly hot pink, leopard-print box and star-spangled tube, StarBrite Whitening Toothpaste is presented to feel more like a part of your beauty routine than a boring hygiene drill. A combination of fluoride and xylitol fights cavities with a fresh, minty formula that leaves your breath fresh. And while you keep your teeth healthy with each brushing, you'll also be noticeably whitening your smile, thanks to calcium peroxide (which is closely related to hydrogen peroxide).

And how about this for a first: StarBrite is sold in the beauty section of Victoria's Secret. If that doesn't make it the most glamorous toothpaste around, we don't know what would!
